

TO: Teaching Faculty and Advisors

FROM: Kendal Washington White

Rebekah Co°kun

Dean of Students Office

DATE: August 21, 2009

RE: New Academic Integrity video to show students on the first day of classes

The Dean of Students Office is pleased to announce a new academic integrity video to show students on the first or second day of classes. It is a little over four minutes long and gives students an introduction to academic integrity issues at The University of Arizona. It provides them with some websites and resources to help them along the way to prevent academic dishonesty.

The video is available on the front page of the Dean of Students Office website (<http://deanofstudents.arizona.edu/>) and is titled “Academic Integrity”. It can also be found on the same website as a larger screen under “Podcasts/Videos”. It is the first video under “Navigating the Code of Academic Integrity” titled “Academic Integrity”.

We encourage faculty to show the video on the first or second day of classes and to use it as an opportunity to discuss your own expectations of the students with regard to academic integrity. If you are not in a classroom with technology, please encourage your students to watch it as a homework assignment.

The Dean of Students Office is more than happy to meet with faculty to discuss academic integrity issues and procedures. Please direct any questions to Kendal Washington White, Associate Dean of Students, or Rebekah Co°kun, Graduate Assistant for Integrity and Ethics, at 520-621-7059.